

Justin Kulik Bio

Justin Kulik is dedicated to fighting for people in Kelowna-Lake Country.

As a university student, he is very supportive of the BC NDP government's Access Grant program, which makes it more affordable for people to get a post-secondary education.

He knows how important agriculture is to the local economy in the Okanagan, and he is passionate about food security and making sure people have access to affordable, healthy food.

Justin is committed to fighting climate change and is proud of the BC NDP's continent-leading plan, CleanBC. He will be a strong advocate for protecting BC's clean air, land, and water, while building a low-carbon economy that creates opportunities for all.
